AREAS OF SPECIALIZATION: Comparative Mysticism, Asian Religions in America, Religion and Popular Culture, Contemplative Studies, Interdisciplinarity, Metamodernism Studies

CURRENT POSITION

Part-Time Assistant Professor of Religious Studies, Interdisciplinary Studies Department,
Kennesaw State University (Fall 2021-present)

Book series co-editor with Timotheus Vermeulen: Metamodern Theory and Criticism Across the Disciplines, Lexington Books

EDUCATION

Ph.D. Department of Religion, Rice University, Spring 2018

Dissertation title: Metamodern Mysticism: Narrative Encounters with Contemporary Western Secular Spiritualities

Dissertation readers: Professor Jeffrey Kripal (chair), Professor William Parsons, Professor Deborah Harter

Abstract: My dissertation addresses the question of how to understand the distinct character of the secular-spiritual mystic subject in a Western contemporary cultural context. Examining narratives of secular-spiritual experience, I engage the historical connections from current religious manifestations such as the Spiritual-But-Not-Religious to specific tenets from Asian religious traditions via their conjoint instantiations in popular culture. I then construct theoretical models to frame the productive destabilizations available through encounters with mysticism/the non-ordinary, positing their cultural significance as a kind of secondhand mysticism. I examine these phenomena via theorization of a post-postmodern or metamodern epistemic cultural context. A comparativist, interdisciplinary methodological framework grounds my analysis.
